“Where were Churches of Christ during the Civil Rights Movement?”

Whenever Jerry Taylor hears the question, “my response is that they were front and center primarily represented in the person of Dr. Fred Gray,” he said. Gray, who served as an attorney for Martin Luther King Jr. and Rosa Parks, grew up in the Holt Street Church of Christ in Montgomery, Ala. At age 12 he moved to Tennessee to attend Nashville Christian Institute, an African-American boarding school operated by members of Churches of Christ.

Dr. Fred Gray

Now 89, Gray still preaches whenever possible and served as an elder of a Church of Christ in Tuskegee, Ala. Amid the national conversation on race sparked by the Minneapolis police killing of George Floyd, Gray talked to The Christian Chronicle about faith, justice and his dream for Churches of Christ.

African Americans have suffered so much from slavery until now and are still suffering. If White churches don't realize that and if they can't believe there is something wrong, then I think there is something wrong with their Christianity.

What do non-Black Christians fail to understand about the injustice that Black Christians feel and have experienced?

No. 1, there ought not to be Black Christians and non-Black Christians. If we all did what Christ said, we would all look at each other and see each other as Christians and do as Jesus taught us on the Sermon on the Mount: “Do unto others as you have would have them do unto you.” For me as a non-White person to say what a White Christian feels would not be objective. I can understand and I can tell you what I think about injustice and anything about it, but it is hard for me to say what a White person feels about injustices or what blacks may feel.

What is your dream for all Churches of Christ?

Christ's word has not changed since it was recorded by inspired men of God who wrote them as directed by the Holy Spirit. When I look to that first Pentecost following the resurrection, as recorded in Acts 2, and what it took to become a Christian that day, I believe it takes the same thing today to become a member of the church. My vision is for the church to continue to be the church established by Christ, to speak where the Bible speaks and to be silent where the Bible is silent.
